5. Much of the success of [] can be attributed to the personal attention and support given to it by the DDP and the Director of Security. [] Deputy Director of Security, made a significant contribution to the work during its initial stages. Bi-weekly status reports were submitted directly to the DDP until 1 January 1968, when this reporting was reduced to once a month. [] was very effective in promoting and developing close cooperation among the various Agency components concerned with the security of field installations. He has also been successful in further developing a very necessary and close working relationship with the Department of State Office of Security.
